

The New York Times

September 24, 2010

SPARETimes

LUCIA WARCK-MEISTER

DUMBO ARTS FESTIVAL (Friday through Sunday) Many forms of cultural expression — videos, concerts, even a performance piece featuring giant pieces of sushi — will be in streets, parks, theaters and art studios for this annual three-day Brooklyn bash, now in its 14th year. The Manhattan Bridge itself will serve as a backdrop for a video projection. “High Tide,” above, a musical art and dance piece, will be performed each day at 3 p.m. from the Manhattan Bridge anchorage to the shore of Brooklyn Bridge Park, reachable from Main and Plymouth Streets; when not in performance, the bubbles will remain on view. Most events are free, but some require admission. The festival gets under way Friday at 6 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 10 a.m., with activities going well into the night; dumboartsfestival.com; (718) 488-8588. (Anne Mancuso)

DUMBO ARTS FESTIVAL in Brooklyn.
See photo highlight.

